

Volunteer Day: 7 June 2019

Educating for sustainable development

ACCIONA believes that sustainability is vital for a better world and a better future. We are convinced that educating our future generations in environmental, social and economic issues will play a key role in finding effective solutions to the challenges facing society in the pursuit of sustainable development.

For this reason, ACCIONA's Volunteer Day proposes a "Sustainability Workshop" in schools, aimed at children aged 6 to 10. The workshop, organised by ACCIONA volunteers, seeks to involve children by fostering participation and awareness in connection with the 17 United Nations Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs).

In each participating class, the ACCIONA volunteers will organise activities lasting at most 2 hours, and will supply the necessary materials.

They will be accompanied by Bopi, a space traveler who comes from very far away and is so surprised by the beauty of our planet, the Earth, that he wants to help us take care of it and preserve it. Through educational games, the children will learn about the Sustainable Development Goals and understand concepts such as poverty, climate change, world hunger, water scarcity and inequality.

They will discover that, through their own day-to-day actions, they too can contribute to achieving the SDGs.

We hope that you will find this initiative of interest.
